

6 'Pomegranate', a wallpaper by Totty Lowther, is utterly unlike other designs that draw on 18th-century indienne textiles. Costing from £190 per 10m roll, it comes in four vibrant colours alongside two more muted hues, and is available either as parchment or hemp/cotton grasscloth and in a super scaled-up version. But then its creator is unusual too. How many people have made felt in the Pamirs or galloped a horse across Rajasthan? Ring 07976 276961, or visit tottylowther.co.uk.

7 At the end of their usable life empty Pepsi bottles, sent to a Mexican workshop, are given a new existence as mouth-blown tumblers before arriving at Eight Holland Street gallery. Surely, to quote the drinks company's slogan, these pieces are 'the choice of a new generation'. Available in four colours, they cost £12 each. 8 Urban Outfitters has taken the traditional stitched mattress pad to new levels with 'Rohini'. By employing the same belt used to bind it up when stored (as shown), you can easily configure it into a floor seat. Available in six colours, it costs £180. Visit urbanoutfitters.com.

9 To accompany the fine antiques for which it's celebrated, Sibyl Colefax & John Fowler serves up trays decorated with designs from its sister company's ranges of fabric, costing from £36 each. Ring 020 7493 2231, or visit sibylcoifax.com.

10 Max Rollitt's four-posters will provide the perfect setting to hold court, just like a king, from your bed. What's more, you will sleep royally well too; each in the range of four has a mattress handmade by a company patronised by HRH. Shown, from left: 'Bala' (from £12,500); and 'New Gloucester' (from £10,850). Both can also come with drapes and a canopy. Ring 01962 791124, or visit maxrollitt.com ■
